AUSSIE BROADBAND

We've been overwhelmed at the great take up of the COVID-19 Connectivity Relief program we are participating in with the NBN. However, we have also seen quite a few questions come through as a result of our last email. So, we're here to clear things up and hopefully answer those important questions you have.

Why payment details have to be provided? I thought this was free!

In order to get the program up and running quickly, we've had to use our regular customer database - which means participants will be asked to enter the same details we ask all customers to provide, including credit card details. We're sorry there was no quick way around this.

We understand why having to provide these details could cause anxiety, but please rest assured the program is free up until 30 September. We will clearly communicate a few weeks before the end of the program via email (and phone if necessary), to let participants know what their options are after the end of the program.

What happens after October 1?

In short, it's up to the participant. They aren't locked into a contract or anything of that nature. We don't operate like that. As stated above, we will contact those participants and give them a number of options on what they can do with the service.

Can schools cover the cost of the modems?

Absolutely. We have seen some schools offer to cover the cost of the modem and for this to happen it just needs to be flagged in an email to us. We will then generate a unique code for the school to provide to the family/friends to use during signup, which will remove the cost for the modem when they add it to the order. The school will then be sent an invoice for the modems.

As we said in our previous email, we will have free modems coming, but due to COVID-19 restrictions playing havoc with production and delivery, they won't be with us until June at this stage. Reaching out to your community to see if people have any spare modems would be a great place to start.

We have more FAQs on this topic on our website. Click the button below if the above don't answer all your questions.
